7132 Hotel in brief

The 7132 Hotel is located at the entrance to the picturesque village of Vals in the Grisons Alps: 1,000 local inhabitants, 1,000 hotel beds, 1,000 sheep, idyllic scenery and an archaic mountain setting with space for future visions. With its renowned thermal springs, Vals is a calm retreat within which the 7132 Hotel offers a thoroughly distinctive atmosphere. Guests at the 7132 Hotel escape the mediocre mainstream and are treated to the last true luxuries of the hectic modern era: leisure, tranquillity and relaxation. This is a place to unwind, indulge oneself and savour the moment in an inspiring and stylish setting. The 7132 is committed to anything that appeals to the senses: exceptional architecture and design, exquisite cuisine and a world-class thermal spa.

It was the unique quality of Vals that provided the inspiration for a new name. 7132 is the postcode of the municipality and has become the trademark of a new tourism concept: the stated aim is to move away from mass tourism and instead preserve the authentic, exclusive nature of what Vals has to offer. The company's activities now all operate under this name - or rather this number.

7132 Thermal Baths

The legendary thermal springs are what makes Vals unique. The highly mineralized water that emerges at 30° Celsius from St. Peter's spring has attracted visitors to the spa for more than 100 years. In 1996 architect Peter Zumthor rose to international fame with his design for a new spa complex. Consisting of raw concrete and 60,000 slabs of local quartzite stone, the monolithic building is an architectural tribute to the archaic beauty of the Vals valley. It has been acclaimed by leading architecture critics worldwide. Peter Zumthor was awarded the Pritzker Prize in 2009.

Rooms

The hotel consists of two buildings: the 5-star 7132 Hotel and the adjacent 7132 House of Architects featuring a unique collection of rooms designed by renowned architects: Tadao Ando, Peter Zumthor, Kengo Kuma and Thom Mayne.

7132 Hotel

The 7132 Hotel will re-open on July 8, 2017. 15 Private Spa Rooms (50 m<sup>2</sup>) and 3 One Bedroom Suites (75 m<sup>2</sup>) are being created, each with a steam bath in the bathroom. Also, 3 new Double Rooms (30 m<sup>2</sup>) and one new Single Room (25 m<sup>2</sup>) will be added, all with breathtaking views of the mountain scenery. Striking in their refined elegance, the three Penthouse Suites (90 m<sup>2</sup>) on the top floor are designed by star architect Kengo Kuma. Their rates includes the transfer to Vals by helicopter.

7132 House of Architects

Zumthor

The Zumthor rooms were created by Peter Zumthor. Scagliola is a plasterwork technique of the Italian Renaissance. The rooms feature hand-painted Habutai silk curtains.

Kuma

Kengo Kuma's work pays tribute to the refined craftsmanship of Japanese cabinet-makers. The occupant is embraced by a cocoon of oak, while the centre of the room features an elegant glass shower with a floor-level base fashioned from Vals stone.

Ando

The 7132 was able to call on the services of master architect Tadao Ando to design a set of rooms for the 7132 House of Architects. His design is a homage to the subtle beauty of Japanese tea houses.

Mayne

Designs by American architect Thom Mayne augmented the House of Architects in 2016. After Zumthor and Ando, he is the third Pritzker Prize laureate to realise some of his visions in Vals.

Gastronomy

Each of the restaurants at the 7132 Hotel shares a passion for prime ingredients, quality-oriented cuisine and personal service.

7132 Silver

This gourmet restaurant is directed by head chef Sven Wassmer. Awarded 17 GaultMillau points and celebrated as “Discovery of the Year” in 2015, he received a second Michelin star in August 2016. Young yet experienced, accessible yet disciplined, at home in Vals and the world at large: Wassmer effortlessly resolves apparent contradictions. A cosmopolitan at heart, Wassmer pursues a distinctively young, bold and dynamic trajectory – inspired by nature itself, he conjures up unique culinary creations far removed from the mainstream.

7132 Red

This restaurant seats up to 90 diners. Head chef Ulf Bladt serves contemporary cuisine that combines local products with the very best ingredients from all over the world. The sumptuous breakfast buffet includes bread that is freshly baked every day, homemade jams, an exquisite selection of freshly brewed teas and a wide variety of local meat and dairy products.

7132 Blue

The bar is the place to be for afternoon tea or an aperitif. It also offers an all-day snack menu. In the evening the Blue Bar is perfect for after-dinner cocktails, while live jazz or relaxing piano music are a regular feature.

Pizzeria DaPapà

Cesare Zucca and his team celebrate Italian dolce vita with freshly prepared pasta and crispy pizzas in an easy-going atmosphere. The authentic furniture and black-and-white photographs on the walls are reminiscent of Cinecittà masterpieces and take us back to the era of Federico Fellini.

History

The first written references to the curative effects of Vals' thermal springs date back to the 17th century. Doctors in the 19th century recommended therapeutic baths in Vals to treat dermatological conditions.

Recreational tourism became the focus in 1964 when German industrialist Kurt Vorlop transformed the original sanatorium into a modern health resort.

In 1983, the municipality of Vals purchased the hotel along with the thermal baths and commissioned Grisons architect Peter Zumthor to design a new spa. When the baths re-opened in 1996 the news spread around the world, and critics praised Zumthor's work as a "lesson in courage and aesthetics". It was only natural for the baths to be declared a national monument in 1998, just two years after they re-opened.

The municipality sold the hotel and baths in 2012. This step was rendered necessary by changing tourism demands and the resulting need for fresh investment. New owner Remo Stoffel, a native of Vals, has since invested in the future of the resort.

The village's postcode served as inspiration for a new name: 7132

The entire complex has been renovated and expanded in order to meet the expectations of a discerning contemporary clientele. Plans featuring further avant-garde projects are also in hand with the aim of enhancing the image of Vals as a mecca of architecture.
