History:

The Costaguti family has taken residence in the Palazzo since the 16th century after they purchased it from the noble Patrizi Montoro family. Successful bankers from northern Italy, the family moved to Rome to serve the Vatican. Pope Innocent X bestowed the title of Marchese di Baldacchino, a title which raised the family's social rank to the level of royalty and with it, the privilege to host the Pope in their home for private receptions. This honorable title was held by just five other families in all of Rome (the other five families included Patrizi Montoro, Theodoli, Sacchetti, Crescenzi, e Soderini).

Architect/Interiors: Sarah Lollini and Mena Venditti of Studio AA

Design Concept: The immaculate Baroque interiors served as a point of departure for both space planning and furnishing.

Artwork/Décor: All modern artwork has been commissioned for the Costaguti Experience under the supervision of the architects.

The architects selected the dimensions, tones, colors and subjects of each work, which were carried out by a group of young, local Roman artists and students. abstract works in the bedrooms), while other works are re-visitations of modern works by such artists as Domenico Gnoli (enlarged details like the neck tie, button, high heels, and bath tub paintings) and Joyce Pensato (graffiti-esque Mickey Mouse painting).

Other décor elements include:

- Furnishings in rich velour and fringe paired with desaturated purples, pinks and peacock set against an original terra cotta floor
- Brass lamps and tables draw inspiration from the antique brass door hardware throughout the home bearing a crowned Baroque-style “C” for Costaguti
- The resin inlay dining table bearing the Costaguti crest integrated in a Baroque design paired with Verner Panton’s iconic “Stacking Chair”
- A replica of Charles Eames’ iconic La Chaise crowns the principle seating area of the living room
