THE COAL OFFICE A NEW EPICENTRE FOR DESIGN

A fresh London home for Tom Dixon's latest experiments, innovations and collaborations.

This April, internationally renowned design brand Tom Dixon Studio will plant its latest and most ambitious flag yet, in the heart of its hometown's largest developing intersection - Kings Cross. Located on Granary Square, the brand's new hub will contribute to an ever-expanding network of creatives and technologists from the likes of Central St. Martins and LVMH to Google and Spiritland.

Against the industrial backdrop of the Coal Drops Yard, The Coal Office will lead the way as a multi-disciplinary platform for innovation in design. Functioning as a live Studio combining shop, workshop and office all under one roof, with the culinary delights of a brand-new restaurant and roof terrace.

Tom Dixon says: 'For us it was imperative not just to find a new office or shop. It was vital to find a new home. London isn't just another city. It is where it all started. We will use these 17,500 square feet in this incredible location as a platform to broadcast our latest ideas in interior design, product innovation and experiments in food, functionality and future living.'

Through stimulating collaborations with names big and small, Tom Dixon will curate an evolving holistic experience designed to push the boundaries of contemporary retail as we know it. The Coal Office will serve as the ultimate centre for Interiors, a journey through outstanding details from beginning to end.
