A project by Juan Carlos Fernandez, Reyes Castellano and Adam Bresnick, along with Antonio Romeo and Miguel Peña.

The restaurant is on a prominent corner facing the recently restored Born Cultural Center, the old Mercat del Born. The food is based on four types of cooking and is the protagonist, while the architectural intervention is a discreet and a fitting backdrop.

The space has been stripped and the original brick and ashlar stone exposed. The former is painted a warm grey to create a more uniform container. The floor uses an encaustic tile typical of the 19th century, with a play of grey hexagons that recall the paving of the Passeig de Gracia. It gives character to the space.

The fixed elements are birch plywood, stained a light white to soften the whole. Indirect lighting and the warm grey upholstery creates a cosy ambience.

The furniture is of Nordic influence, with soft lines and noble materials that stand out; an ochre fabric adds a contrast to the restaurant.
